

On a lovely day Loch Lomond Sailing Club hosted the latest round of the Scottish Solo series on Saturday July 14th. 16 boats entered from the Borders to Aberdeen and found sun and 10 to 14 knots of wind with enough oscillations to keep everyone on their toes. LLSC ran 3 very slick races on triangle sausage courses. The only problem being the speed that the local foiling moths were sailing at!

The first race was won by David Sword from CCC beating Keith Milroy (St Mary's Loch SC). Keith then did a horizon job in the second race. This meant it was all down to the final race. David won with Kev Gibb (Largo Bay SC) second. This meant David won on 2pts with Keith on 3 pts and Kev taking third place on countback from John Colgrave from Aberdeen & Stonehaven YC.

As usual though the racing was very close throughout with any mistake punished by losing multiple places. Many thanks to all the team at LLSC for a excellent day.

6 Scottish boats are heading to Hayling for the Nationals this weekend. The next traveler along with the Ben Ledi trophy is at Aberdeen & Stonehaven YC on August 11 and 12.
